Why finance training matters

Finance is an important measure of the performance of companies and individuals. Managers in every function need to understand its importance and relevance while making business decision.

Finance for Non-Finance programme is designed to develop financial skills among professionals working in non-finance functions like HR, production and sales and marketing to help them make business decisions and facilitate smooth communication with the finance team.

Programme: Finance for Non-finance Professionals

Our three-day programme will guide you on how the finance function operates in corporates and elaborate on the use of the information provided by different functions while preparing financial statements. Participants will gain an understanding of the techniques and principles used to prepare financial statements.

The programme will also focus on the different types of costs involved and the relevance of each while making a decision along with working capital management and variance analysis among other things.

The programme objective is to raise the financial awareness of professionals and enable them to make better short-term or long-term decisions in managing their businesses.

What our participants say

It was really a great learning experience, which really can't be expressed in a small feedback box. For me, the training module 'Finance for Non-Finance' has made my boardroom experience and understanding far more refined and helped broaden my thought process.

Mitesh Dave

It was great learning from this training program. It was great presentation with participatory approach and interactive sessions including examples, which were really enjoyable and informative. Both the trainers were highly experienced and aware about the current market and industries, and the examples were really useful. The trainers presented the sessions very enthusiastically. Great thanks to Grant Thornton!!!!

Aditya Pradhan
