

Finance for Non-Finance Professionals programme

Learning & Development Academy by Grant Thornton Bharat

Why finance training matters

Finance is an important measure of the performance of companies and individuals. Managers in every function need to understand its importance and relevance while making business decisions.

Finance for Non-Finance programme is designed to develop financial skills among professionals working in non-finance functions like HR, production and sales and marketing to help them make business decisions and facilitate smooth communication with the finance team.

Programme details

Our programme will guide you on how the finance function operates in an organisation and elaborate on the use of the information provided by different functions while preparing financial statements. Participants will gain an understanding of the techniques and principles used to prepare financial statements.

The programme will also focus on the different types of costs involved and the relevance of each while making a decision along with working capital management and variance analysis among other things.

The programme objective is to raise the financial awareness of professionals and enable them to make better short-term or long-term decisions in managing their businesses.

What our participants say

It was a great learning experience. The 'Finance for Non-Finance Professionals programme' has refined my boardroom experience and understanding, broadening my thought process.

Mitesh Dave

Metropolis Healthcare Ltd.

The participatory approach and interactive sessions in the programme were really enjoyable and informative. Both the trainers were highly experienced and aware of the current market and industries. The examples showed were useful for a real-life scenario.

Aditya Pradhan

GTI

The content covered in the workshop was very good and so was the trainers' knowledge. They were able to explain in detail all the questions asked by the participants.
